

The Compiler takes existing assets and allows someone, in the fashion of a recipe, to turn them into another video.

Just a thought before moving on to visuals is tangibility. There's no one, visually and interactively who do tangibility better than video game makers.

Why—because their goal is to keep someone in a virtual environment away from tangible reality as long as possible.

You click a button or move something, the screen shakes, speakers roar, and clunk, like a key going into a big chest, shit happens. And thus is created a semi-cinematic, immersive environment that (some) parents & girlfriends hate, because it sucks their children and child-like boyfriends away into a faux reality.
